A BRIEF HISTORY OF MONTGOMERY.

BY M. P. BLUE, Esq.

The City of Montgomery is situated on the east bank of the Alabama river, descending, about four hundred miles by river from Mobile, and thirty miles from Wetumpka, at the Falls of the Coosa river, the head of steamboat navigation. About twelve miles by water from the city the Coosa and Tallapoosa rivers unite and form the Alabama river. Its geographical location for trade is not exceeded by any interior city of the State. Within a mile of the corporate limits begin the rich prairie lands on the south and southeast, which are continuous for twenty-six miles. On the east and west a class of lands of rare fertility approach very near the city. The trade of Lowndes, Pike, Coosa, Macon, Tallapoosa, Butler, and other propinquous counties, prior to the late war, found their best market in Montgomery. Cotton and other produce frequently came from as high up as Chambers, Randolph and Talladega, and from Henry county on the Chattahoochee river, and the counties on the Florida line. This trade was received by wagons and carts, before the completion of railroads that have succeeded but too well in changing the channel, to the injury of Montgomery. From the earliest days the growth of the city was steady and permanent, unusually stimulated, however, by the removal of the State Capitol to Montgomery, and by the progress of the Montgomery and West Point, and Mobile and Montgomery Railroads. Our railroad system at present is most admirable and important, placing the city in direct and speedy communication with all points, North, East, South and West. Montgomery has at last become a most important railroad centre in the South. By the South and North Alabama Railroad, she has connection with the Railroads to the North and throughout the Western States to the Pacific. The Western Railroad gives her connection with the Railroads leading to the Mississippi river, in one direction, and in the other, with the Railroads extending eastwards, through Georgia, South and North Carolina, Virginia, on to the extreme Northeastern States. The Mobile & Montgomery Railroad places the city in the great Railroad highway from Texas and Louisiana, and eventually, by the Southern Pacific road, on the nearest route from the Pacific Ocean. And by the Montgomery and Eufaula Railroad, the city is connected with the Railroad system of Southwestern Georgia and East Florida.

The site of the city of Montgomery was, unquestionably, known to the race of "Mound Builders" in remote times. Those aboriginal people whose existence and localities were attested by the mounds, must have often wandered through the original forests covering Montgomery in quest of game, and in the chase of wild beasts. They regaled themselves, too, with fish and muscles taken from the Alabama river where it laves the winding northern border of the city. Frequently they fastened their light canoes on the Montgomery side of the river, and sought shelter and repose amid the dense foliage, from the sun's rays during the sultry summer.

At "Alabama Town," founded in 1818 by General John Scott, Thomas Bibb and Dr. Manning, on a bluff of the river just below and adjoining Montgomery, two mounds existed when the first white settlers located there. The larger one, which stood near the public road, was about ninety feet square and twenty-five feet high, on the top of which there was a hickory tree at least a century and a half old. In 1833, these mounds were dug down to make brick for Mr. McGehee's "Planters Hotel," on Montgomery street. Under these mounds were found human bones, remains of earthenware, arrow heads, and trinkets. Sufficient bones were removed to the shop of Dr. S. S. Garrett, on Commerce street, to construct nearly a complete skeleton. The small mound was insignificant, and was located nearer the river bluff. The modern Indians of this region knew nothing of the construction of these mounds. They were here when their progenitors arrived, their builders having long anterior disappeared from the country.

Hernando DeSoto and his Spanish Cavaliers were doubtless the first Europeans who had a glimpse of this locality. According to Col. Pickett, who carefully studied and ascertained the route of these bold adventurers and explorers, the meeting between them and Tuscaloosa, the powerful Chocta Chief, took place at Line Creek, the boundary line of Montgomery and Macon counties. From that point the Spaniards accompanied that Indian Chief, holding him in duress, to Maubila, in Clark or Wilcox county, the principal town or city of his Empire. They must needs pass through Montgomery county, and their route would doubtless carry them through this city. Glimpses of this locality were also had by the French in 1714, when Bienville's fleet of boats was pushing up the river to establish the old "Fort Toulouse," and by the English after 1763, during their occupation of that Fort. Their expeditions by land would necessarily pass within the limits of this city.

Abram Mordecai, a Jew from Pennsylvania, who settled, as early as 1785, on Line Creek within Montgomery county, informed Col. Pickett in 1848 that during the Revolutionary war, an Indian town existed on the site of the "Alabama Town" referred to, where Col. Tait, a British officer, drilled squads of Tories. As late as 1798 Col. Hawkins, United States Indian Agent, in his enumeration of Indian towns on the Alabama river, locates "Ecunchate" (ecunna, earth, and chatte, red,) on the same site.

In his "Reminiscences," published in 1859, the late Thomas S. Woodward says that the Indian name of the present city of Montgomery was "Chunнанugga Chatty," or "High Red Bluff." Another designation of the locality was "Hostile Bluff," probably from the hostile character of the Indians in the vicinity.

The first white settler within the present corporate limits of Montgomery was Arthur Moore, who had removed from Georgia. During the fall of 1814, this fearless pioneer located on the bluff of the Alabama river, about one hundred yards above the present City Powder Magazine. Here he resided for several years in a rude pole cabin, erected with his own hands, subsisting on fish from the river, wild game that abounded all around him, and on the generous yield of a small piece of ground about his hut, then covered with the virgin mould. The late Gen. Thomas S. Woodward visited him during the winter of 1814-15, and remained several days. The General says that he assisted in the killing of several deer within a few hundred yards of Mr. Moore's residence. About 1824, Mr. Moore removed to Autauga county, where he resided many years. He visited Montgomery during the winter of 1855, and was astonished at the growth and prosperity of the city. He was still alive two years subsequent to the close of the late civil war. Several of his descendants are citizens of Butler county.

The city of Montgomery was founded by Mr. Andrew Dexter, of Massachusetts, who came South just after the close of the war of 1812, to better his fortunes. He attended the public land sales at Milledgeville, Georgia, where on the 13th of August, 1817, he bid off, at seven dollars per acre, all of section 7, township 16, range 18, except the northwest quarter. The terms of the sale were, five per cent. of the purchase money cash down, and the balance of the first fourth within forty days, and a fourth each year for the next three years. Mr. Dexter came over immediately to look at his land, and fortunately associated Mr. John Falconer with him in his project of a town. The latter furnished the money to pay for the quarter section selected for the town. This explains why the patent under date of August, 1821, is in the name of Mr. Falconer, assignee, and why the title to lots in the original survey of Montgomery emanated from that gentleman.

Mr. Dexter selected the southwest quarter for his town, embracing all of the present city north of South Alabama street, east of Court street, south of Jefferson street, and west of a north and south line running through Capitol square. The first survey was made by a Mr. Hall, and the present Columbus street was designed for Pearl or Market street. Changing his survey, Mr. Dexter had another executed by Mr. John Blackwell (uncle of the late Peter B. Mastin). Upon the suggestion of Mr. John G. Klincke, the town was named "New Philadelphia." Mr. Klincke claimed to have felled the first tree in clearing a place for his (the first) store house, and that when it toppled he exclaimed, prophetically: "This is the first tree—future ages will tell the tale."

Confident that the seat of the State government would eventually be located in his town, Mr. Dexter from the first reserved the present location of the State Capitol for that purpose. About thirty years elapsed, however, and not until twenty years after his death was this expectation realized. Mr. Dexter also donated five acres in the southwest part of the northeast quarter of his section for a cemetery. This now constitutes the south half of the "old graveyard" or "Scott free burying ground." To this donation, General John Scott added five more acres in 1828, when he accepted Mr. Dexter's relinquishment of the northeast quarter.

Mrs. William H. Jones (daughter of Rev. Stephen Pouncey), who died early in 1818, was the first white person interred in the "old graveyard." The next interments were the children of a Mrs. Hewitt. Mrs. Charlotte Apthorpe Martha Dexter, wife of the founder of the town, who died August 17, 1819, was among the earliest females interred, Rev. James King officiating at the funeral.

Several of the merchants and traders of the town of "Augusta," twelve miles above Montgomery, and of Fort Jackson (old Fort Toulouse), were persuaded to come to the new town. Population at once flowed in from the county and from other States to the east and north, so that within three years "New Philadelphia" could boast of four or five hundred inhabitants. Among the purchasers of lots at the first sale in the fall of 1817, were Jonathan C. Farley, James Vickers and Jeremiah Loftin.

Of the earliest inhabitants of "New Philadelphia," or "Yankee Town," as some derisively called it, Mr. Klincke enumerates Andrew Dexter, John G. Klincke, James Vickers, Jonathan C. Farley, Daniel Carpenter, Dr. James Morrow, Dr. James Mitchell, Dr. George Gullett, Mr. Dice, John Falconer, James Eads, Jeremiah Loftin (first Justice of the Peace), Thomas Lewis, William Lewis, Green Wood, Mr. Stone (son of Judge Stone and son-in-law of Esquire Loftin), John Goldthwaite, John Hewitt, Widow Hewitt and family, William J. Larkins, Henry Farley, A. M. Reynolds and family, Mr. Baker, John Belew (carpenter), Robert Mosely, N. E. Benson, William Graham, Esquire Sims, Mr. Glass (well-digger), and Dr. C. C. Billingslea.

The "Alabama Company," consisting of Messrs. John Taylor, William Taylor, John Lucas, Samuel Goodall, John A. Jones, George R. Clayton, William M. Bostick, Clement Freeny, Charles Williamson, John Scott, Fleming Grantland, Thomas H. Kenan, Sophia Coleman, Edward Cary, Seaborn Jones, John Nelson, and Nathaniel Battelle—all citizens of Georgia—laid out the town of "East Alabama" in 1818, on Fraction A of Section 12, Township 16, Range 17, which the Company had purchased at the land sales at $57 per acre. This constitutes that portion of the city of Montgomery embraced within the Alabama river, Clayton, Court and Goldthwaite streets.

During the same year, General John Scott, Thomas Bibb and Dr. Manning founded the town of "Alabama," adjoining our present city below on the river, on the East fractional half of Section 11, Township 16, Range 17. The site of that town is now included within the premises of Mr. James Chappell. Among the earliest inhabitants were:

Captain John Gause and family, William Gause and family, James Gause, Mrs. Gause and her daughter Eliza, William Peacock and family, William Ashley and family, Mr. Jones and family, Mr. Perry, John D. Bibb, Maj. James W. Johnston (mail contractor), John Edmondson (Clerk of the Court), and Mrs. Ann Molton, as Mr. Klincke says, "an entire civic and military population; no merchant or trader in the town." Most of the inhabitants cultivated lands in the "Big Bend" of the river, opposite, or in the surrounding country. Here the first jail of the county was built by the late Col. Wade Allen. The first session of the Circuit Court, Judge Webb presiding, was held in the large dwelling house occupied by Mr. Neil Blue, who vacated it during the term in consideration of five dollars per day. Jonathan C. Farley was foreman of the first Grand Jury. This town soon disappeared after the removal of the County officers to Montgomery, the seat of Justice.

By act of December 3, 1819, "New Philadelphia" and "East Alabama" were incorporated into one town, under the name of Montgomery, in honor of General Richard Montgomery, who fell, December 31, 1775, in the attack upon Quebec. On the 24th of January, 1822, Edward Mosely, Benjamin Davis, John Hughes, William Graves and William Laprade, commissioners for the purpose, selected a site for the Court House of the county. This was on Court square, at the location of the "Artesian Basin," upon which a Court House was then in process of construction. The selection was a compromise between the citizens of the two united towns, each contending for that public structure. The Court House was a two-story framed building and was erected by Mr. Jepson, who had assisted in the building of the first State Capitol at Milledgeville, Georgia.

In the original act of incorporation, the corporate limits of the town embraced Fractional Section 12, Township 16, Range 17, and the southeast and southwest quarters of Section 7, Township 16, Range 18, including "all that part of the Alabama river lying opposite to said Fraction 12, within sixty yards of its margin, in the County of Montgomery." By act of January 24, 1839, the limits were extended so as to include the northeast quarter of Section 13, Township 16, Range 17, "Clayton's plat," the northwest quarter of Section 7, Township 16, Range 18, "Scott's plat," and the northwest quarter of Section 18, Township 16, Range 18, the "Goldthwaite plat" and the "Mayhew and Whitman plat." Mr. George R. Clayton sold fifty-two lots (the first sale) in his purchase, March 13, 1834, and Messrs. Whitman and Mayhew sold thirty-two lots in their plat on the 13th of February, 1835.

Lumber was scarce and very high when the first settlers began to erect houses in the new town. Consequently, most of the first structures were necessarily built of hewed and unhewed logs. Mr. Jonathan C. Farley erected the first framed store house and dwelling in the fall and winter of 1817. The store house stood at the corner of Market and Hull streets, the present location of Mr. T. S. Madigan's brick store. His dwelling stood on the adjoining lot. A mill was early established on "Spring Creek," now known as "Eight Mile Creek," east of Montgomery, by Messrs. Pinkston and Allen. This afforded a fair supply of excellent lumber for several years. Supplies were also obtained from a mill on a creek in Autauga county, up the river.

In the selection of sites for stores, the first merchants chose them on the first four squares on Market street below Capitol square. In the early days, these locations were suitable to catch the trade from the Line Creek road and the road from the Tallapoosa river, along which were the chief settlements of the county. The upper parts of Washington and Adams were the favorite streets for residences, as they afforded dry, elevated sites healthy and convenient to the business portion of the town.

The progress of the town within less than four years is exhibited in the following statement of the "Montgomery Republican" in the issue of February 17, 1821:

"In that part known as New Philadelphia, east of Court street, which was first settled, there were erecting, of two-story, five; of one-story, two; and previously finished, of two-story, five; of one story twelve—in all twenty-four; of tolerable log houses, nine; of inferior log houses, eighteen. In that part of the town known as East Alabama, west of Court street, of buildings erecting and finished (including four not raised which were in preparation and three double tenements as single buildings) of two-story, seven; of one-story, nine; previously built, of log houses, six; of superior order, five, making of frame buildings erected in the whole town, twenty-six; of frame buildings erecting, twenty-three; total frame buildings, forty-nine; log buildings, including several of two stories and many comfortably constructed dwellings, thirty-eight; making total, exclusive of those before exempted, eighty-seven. Besides which, says the Republican, we are about to make preparations for a place of worship, an Academy, a Court House and a Jail, besides private buildings. We have at present ten stores of assorted merchandise, three public houses, four or five practicing lawyers, two or three regular bred physicians, one teacher, several carpenters, two master bricklayers, one cabinet maker, one saddle and harness maker, two smith's shops, one watchmaker and silversmith, one tinner's shop, one shoemaker," &c.

The profession had their representatives from the earliest period. Dr. Samuel W. Patterson, who soon ascertained that the demand for his medical services was not sufficient to support him, opened a school, as early as 1818. The late Neil Blue was the next to enter that useful profession. He located here March 15, 1819, and within a few weeks was instructing the youth of both sexes, for which his six years' experience in that line in the "Old North State" had well fitted him. The third teacher was Jonathan Mayhew, still living at Huntsville, in this State, who opened a school in the town January 31, 1821.

Dr. James Mitchell, who removed from Tennessee early in 1818, was the first practicing physician in the town. The Doctor married a sister of Col. Bolling Hall, and retired to a farm in Autauga county, from which county he removed in 1853 to Texas, where he was still residing last fall. Dr. C. C. Billingslea commenced the medical practice in Montgomery in 1819, Dr. Morra the same year, and Drs. H. W. Henry and Moses Andrew in 1820. Dr. Morra erected a building on the corner of Market and Hull streets, for a drug store and medical office, just after their arrival. This had painted on it, in large letters, "Drugs and Medicines." It is better known to the citizens as Dr. Henry's drug store, as the Doctor purchased it in 1821. It remained as one of the early and notable structures until 1849, when it blew down during a wind storm. The earliest legal gentlemen practitioners were Andrew Dexter, the founder of the town, who had been licensed in Massachusetts, John Edmondson, Nimrod E. Benson, Henry Goldthwaite, John D. Bibb, Alwin A. McWhorter and E. D. Washburn. Clients were few and the causes not very complicated. All of the gentlemen, however, combined other business with that of their profession.

The earliest merchants, or those who came in the fall of 1817, were Messrs. Klincke and Dice, Jonathan C. Farly, Daniel Carpenter, John Falconer, Eads, and Gullett. Among others who opened business houses in Montgomery during the next ten years may be mentioned: Lewis & Brown, William Graham, Walter B. Lucas, Geo. Wilkin-son & Co., McNamara, Bell & Hanrick, Christopher & Parkin, E. D. Washburn, Hall & Goldthwaite, C. Billings-lea, Davis & Wild, Barrett Ames, Freeney & Bell, W. & P. D. Sayre, George Whitman, Jonathan Mayhew, G. & R. Brown, John M. Bach, John Gindrat, E. Reeder & Co., Peacock & Fitchett, Charles Sproule, James Humphries, G. W. Tarleton, John Dowe, Robert Campbell & Co., J. S. Bailey & Co., Justus Wyman, J. Hutchinson, E. Farren, John Kirby, Thomas Platt & Co., A. D. Hassell, John Powell, A. B. Quimby, William Travis, Andrew McBryde, Hooker & Webster, E. B. Todd, Rogers & Colman, North-rup & Gordon, C. D. Bellows, L. W. Pond, N. P. Frith and John W. Freeman.

Mr. John Falconer, who was associated with Mr. Dexter in founding the town, was the first Postmaster. At first, the Post Office was located at a store near the present Capitol square. Mr. Falconer removed it in 1822 to a building adjoining the store of himself and brother Isaac Falconer, on the south side of Market street, at the inter-section of Hull street. This structure he removed to the east side of Commerce street in 1831. He retained the position of Postmaster until July 1, 1834, when he was suc-ceeded by the late Neil Blue, who had been his clerk in the Post Office for over seven years.

In the early days of the town, mail facilities were exceed-ingly limited, and the business of the Post Office very light. The chief mail came from the East once a week, and was brought at first on horseback, then in a sulky. In April, 1821, Lewis Calfrey of Fort Hawkins, Georgia, and Major James W. Johnston, one of the early settlers, started a stage line, one trip each week, from Montgomery eastward, the passenger fare being twelve and one half cents per mile. In March, 1823, Major Johnston improved the facilities by making two trips per week. In May, 1823, James Beddo put on a line of stages from Montgomery to Fort Mitchell on the Chattahoochee river, once a week trips. In May, 1826, Hugh Knox & Co. commenced running stages three times per week between Montgomery and Milledgeville. In August, 1828, a stage line was started from Montgomery to Blakely, by Major J. W. Johnston in association with Ward Taylor and Brother of Butler county and Patrick Burns of Baldwin county. The service was increased in March, 1830, by Ward Taylor & Co. to tri-weekly.

Mr. Jonathan Battelle, a native of Boston and a member of the "Alabama Company," inaugurated the Press in Montgomery. His printing press, type, cases and other fixtures were shipped to Savannah in the fall of 1820, from whence they were hauled to the town. He secured the services of the late Edward W. Thompson, a practical printer, who had served his apprenticeship in the same office in New York with the elder Harpers. The first issue of Mr. Battelle's paper, the "Montgomery Republican," appeared January 6, 1821. The office used was in the rear room of the store house of Messrs. Carpenter and Farley, corner of Market and Hull streets. The price of this weekly was four dollars per annum, and the day of publication Saturday. In the fall of 1825, the name was changed to that of "Alabama Journal," under which name it was continued until it ceased to be published, the latter part of 1857. Among the early editors were: Messrs. J. Battelle, Simeon Fisk, Rev. Dr. Moses Andrew, Charles Shaw, E. D. Washburn, Henry Goldthwaite and G. W. B. Towns, afterwards Governor of Georgia. Mr. Battelle, in connection with Mr. J. W. Townsend, established the "Mobile Register" in the fall of 1821.

Early in 1818, Mr. James Vickers provided a house of public entertainment by the erection of a large double log cabin on lot thirty-one, north side of Market street, next to the intersection of Decatur street. Three dollars per day was the rate for board and lodging. Horses of travelers and others who tarried with him were well fed at his stable on the side street. The erection of the "Globe Tavern," afterwards called the "Indian Queen Tavern," by G. W. B. Towns, in 1820, materially decreased the patronage of Mr. Vickers. This tavern was a two-story framed structure erected on lots 23 and 24 on the north side of Market street, the present location of the dwellings of Ralph Williams and R. E. Bolling. This structure was destroyed by fire on the 4th March, 1830. Mr. Clement Freeney, a member of the "Alabama Company," during the year 1820 had built the "Montgomery Hotel," better known as "Bell Tavern," for the accommodation of the citizens of "East Alabama" town. This was located on the west side of Commerce street near the junction of Tallapoosa street. It was originally ninety feet long, sixty feet wide, and two-story, with a double verandah the entire length. Among its proprietors may be mentioned: Col. Freney, Dr. J. S. Bailey, Mrs. Harmon (who married B. W. Bell), B. W. Bell, Geo. W. Thompson, and Dr. J. B. Clopton. A portion of this, the oldest house in Montgomery, is still standing, but has been declared a nuisance by the City Council. The "Mansion House" was also established early in 1821, at the present Exchange Hotel corner.

The dramatic talent among the early inhabitants was soon developed. In the fall of 1822, a Thespian Society was organized that gave its first public performance on the night of the 17th of December, at the "Montgomery Hotel." On this occasion, Shakespeare's great tragedy of Julius Cæsar was produced with: Julius Cæsar, Benjamin Fitzpatrick; Octavius Cæsar, G. W. B. Towns; Marcus Antonius, Henry Goldthwaite; M. Æmil Lepidus, John Edmondson. Of the twenty-three citizens who represented parts in the play, only one, after the lapse of over fifty-five years, is living, namely Daniel Sayre, and he is yet a resident near the city. Three of them afterwards obtained high distinctions, to wit: Mr. Fitzpatrick became Governor of the State and United States Senator, Mr. Towns, Governor of Georgia, and Mr. Goldthwaite, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Alabama. During the spring of 1822, Mr. Judah, a talented Virginian, visited the town and assisted the Thespian Society in several entertainments at the "Globe Tavern."

The present merchants and grocers of Montgomery, with their railroad and steamboat facilities, can hardly realize the difficulties encountered by their early predecessors. When the pioneer merchants opened here, their dry goods and groceries were brought by wagons and on horseback from Savannah and Charleston. The route, too, was through the Creek Indian Nation, where the roads were imperfect and not kept in good repair. The bridges over the creeks in the Nation were of the rudest kind, and exorbitant tolls were exacted by the Indians. Very soon afterwards, goods were also transported from Mobile by barges and pole boats, which usually consumed from fifty to seventy days in a trip up the river against the current. Boats occasionally came from East Tennessee, passing from the Holston river to the other rivers and finally down the Coosa into the Alabama.

A boat arrived March 1, 1821, "the history of which," says the Montgomery Republican, "will no doubt seem almost incredible to strangers. She is a keel boat, fifty feet long, six feet beam, six feet deep, and capable of carrying near one hundred barrels. She was built at West Point, East Tennessee, where she was loaded for this place and proceeded 100 miles down the Tennessee river to the mouth of Hiwassee, thence 65 miles to the entrance of the Wocoo, up the latter a certain distance, when she was transported (with the cargo) 10 miles by land to the Connessauga, thence to and down the Eastanaula, through the Coosa into the Alabama, a distance of nearly 1000 miles from the interior."

Until the fall of 1821, no steamboat had come up as high as Montgomery on the Alabama river. Grave doubts had existed as to the practicability of steaming so far up, in consequence of the sand bars, islands and narrow channels in places. Hence, prior to that time, navigation was confined to barges and pole boats, which of course was a tedious and expensive process. It was reserved, however, for the steamboat Harriet, Captain Morrill, to solve the question of navigation by steamboat to our city. The Montgomery Republican, referring to her arrival, said: "On Monday last (22d October, 1821), the citizens of this town were gratified with the arrival of the steamboat Harriet from Mobile, and many flocked to the landing to welcome her to Montgomery. This being the first steamboat which ever ascended the Alabama river as high as this place, it excited a good deal of curiosity among those who had never before seen one, and all were highly pleased. On Tuesday afternoon, she took a party of ladies and gentlemen on an excursion of pleasure about seven miles up the river, which she performed at the rate of nearly six miles an hour against the current. The Harriet arrived in ten days from Mobile, including three days' detention at Claiborne, Cahawba and Selma."

The next steamboat that visited Montgomery was the Tensa, Captain Romer, which arrived March 5, 1822. The third was the Cotton Plant, Captain Chandler, arriving August 17, 1822, with a large barge in tow.

In July, 1823, an ordinance was adopted by the Town Council to secure the erection of a good wharf at the landing for steamboats. This provided that the wharf should not exceed two hundred feet front, and also prescribed the rates of wharfage to be collected by the company that might undertake the construction of the proposed wharf. A Wharf Company, of which John Goldthwaite was President, was at once organized, which held the privileges for twenty years. After considerable litigation in the courts, about 1846, the city wrested the wharf from the Company. The wharfage subsequently became a most important item of city revenue, reaching as high as fifty thousand dollars during one year. The construction of railroads in later years and the change in the course of trade, however, have destroyed this source of revenue.

Prior to the consolidation of the two towns "New Philadelphia" and "East Alabama," the citizens of each were wont to observe the recurrence of Washington's birth day and the 4th of July, in a public and becoming manner, but separately. Those of "Alabama Town" also were not forgetful of the honors due those memorable days. The cannon used on those occasions was one of the eight that Bienville placed on the bastions at Fort Toulouse in June 1714. The Montgomery Republican thus refers to the celebration in Montgomery of the 4th of July, 1821. "On the evening of July 3rd, a ball was given at the "Montgomery Hotel" in honor of the birth of our independence. On the 4th, the rejoicing commenced with the roaring of cannon, which was kept up, periodically, during the day. At 12 o'clock, the citizens assembled at the "Globe Tavern," where they were addressed by Dr. Moses Andrew in strains of pious patriotism worthy of himself and the occasion. Next, the Declaration of Independence was feelingly read by John D. Bibb, prefaced by a short and appropriate exordium and the audible pronunciation of the honored names subjoined to the most interesting instrument he held in his hand. After which an elegant and appropriate oration, to a crowded audience of both sexes, was delivered by Henry Goldthwaite, which requires no higher compliments than were paid in the bursts of applause which succeeded his closing period. At 2½ o'clock, a respectable number of citizens returned to the "Globe Tavern" and partook of a sumptuous dinner prepared for the occasion, and served in style highly creditable to the establishment, at which N. E. Benson, Intendant, presided, assisted by J. Battelle.

The ancient and honorable order of Freemasons was well represented among the early citizens of Montgomery. Still, however, there was no Lodge in operation here during the first four years of our town.

On the 20th of May, 1822, Montgomery Lodge was consecrated and the officers installed in due and sacred form by Companions Luther Blake and Charles Shaw, and other Past Masters. Dr. Moses Andrew performed the services of Chaplain in a solemn and impressive manner. The officers installed were: George Wilkinson, W. M.; Alwin A. McWhorter, S. W.; William Peacock, J. W.; William A. Campbell, Secretary; John Falconer, Treasurer; Micajah Blakely, S. D.; Edward W. Thompson, J. D., and Thomas Dulany, T. At 3 o'clock, the brethren sat down to a dinner furnished by Major Clement Freeney at the "Montgomery Hotel," with his usual good taste, variety and abundance. The time was spent with that temperate festivity and flow of soul which should ever characterize the craft.

By the special request of the Masonic fraternity, Rev. Dr. Andrew performed divine service in Montgomery on the 24th of June, 1821, the anniversary of the birth-day of John the Baptist.

In February, 1823, Mr. George Wilkinson had completed a Masonic Hall for the use of the Lodge. The building was a two-story framed structure erected on the west side of Commerce street, adjoining the present Exchange Hotel, and the lot is now owned by Mr. Nicholas Becker. The Montgomery Republican pronounced it as correct a specimen of simple, correct architecture as can be found in the State. "The design was correct, and the workmanship is creditable to the artificer." This hall is now displaced by Mr. Becker's fine three story brick building.

Preachers of different denominations occasionally visited Montgomery in the early days and performed divine services in private dwellings and in the Court House. The Rev. James King, a Methodist minister from North Carolina, was the first to preach in the town. The Rev. James H. Mellard, also of the same Church, and a circuit rider, preached several times. In January, 1822, Bishop Enoch George of the M. E. Church, while en route to hold the Mississippi Conference, tarried here and preached in the Court House. But the first effective movement in the direction of a Church edifice was made by Rev. Moses Andrew, a local Methodist preacher, and Elder William Sayre of the Presbyterian Church. During the spring of 1823 they drew up and circulated an address or appeal to the public on the subject. They succeeded in obtaining subscriptions in money and materials amounting to between seven and eight hundred dollars. Trustees were elected in July, 1823, and steps taken to erect a house of worship for all denominations. The edifice, however, was not completed sufficiently for services until 1827. This building was erected on lot one of Square twenty, "East Alabama" plat, the present location of the Court street M. E. Church, to which society it was relinquished in 1830. It was first used as a school house by Mr. Cornelius Buck, who, for that privilege, had placed some seats in it.

Upon the reception of the news, on the 25th of February, 1825, that John Quincy Adams had been elected President of the United States by the House of Representatives, his ardent political friends proceeded at once to celebrate the important event. The old Bienville Fort Toulouse cannon was brought into requisition. This was placed about midway between the lower corners of Market street opposite the present Artesian Basin. Several rounds were discharged without accident. Finally, when re-charged for another salute, a banter was made that no Adams man present was fearless enough to apply the match. Ebenezer Pond, esq., at present alive and for forty odd years an honored citizen of Coosa county, stepped forward and, seizing a fence rail lighted at one end, discharged the piece. At once, it bursted around the touch-hole, sending the breech over the square into Monroe street in the rear. Small particles of the cannon flew around promiscuously. No one, however, was injured but Mr. Pond, who was laid flat on the ground. He recovered, however, in a short time, but has ever since borne powder marks in his face. This old relic of French domination in Alabama had probably lain in the water around Fort Toulouse (Fort Jackson) for half a century before being discovered by a soldier of the modern American garrison, by whom it was cleaned off and prepared for service. It was doubtless much strained and weakened only three days previous, when the citizens were celebrating the anniversary of Washington's birthday. On that occasion, the last charge was rammed down beneath several inches of the stiff blue river clay. The remnant of the piece stood sentinel at the northeast corner of Market street and Court square for over half a century. On the afternoon of July 3, 1876, it was dug up, cleaned, and carried in the public procession on the occasion of celebrating the 4th of July of that year. Since that period it has rested in the Monroe entrance to the City Market.

The visit of General Gilbert Motier LaFayette was a most important event in the early days of Montgomery. No one was more deserving of honors from the American people, and none ever received more patriotic and grateful homage.

A large escort had gone to Fort Mitchell on the Chattahoochee river to receive him as he landed on Alabama soil and accompany him to this place. The nation's distinguished guest arrived at Montgomery on Sunday morning, April 3, 1825. The escort with the nation's benefactor halted in the rear of the present Capitol square, from whence they walked to the top of the hill. Almost the entire population of the town, as well as several hundred citizens of the surrounding country, had assembled to greet the great French Captain. Col. Bolling Hall, sr., introduced General LaFayette to Governor Israel Pickens, whose feelings on that occasion prevented him from making a speech, but, as General Woodward remarks, LaFayette did not fail to perceive that the Governor was a great man. Col. Arthur Hayne, a distinguished officer of the war of 1812, was also present and one of the chief managers, one of the most polite gentlemen of any age or country. After the hearty reception exercises, General LaFayette was escorted to the elegant residence of Mr. John Edmondson on Commerce street, which had been engaged and fitted up for his accommodation. During his brief sojourn, all kinds of business seemed to be neglected, and all vied with each other in their attentions to the only surviving Major-General of the American Revolution. The reunion between him and John Caffy, sr., Isaac Lansdale, John Griffin, Robert Ware, sr., and other Revolutionary soldiers, was truly affecting. On the night of April 4th, a grand ball was given in his honor in the second story of Col. Freeny's brick building, still standing at the southwest corner of Commerce and Tallapoosa streets. General LaFayette retired from the ball room about 11 o'clock, and lower down on Commerce street, at the residence of John Gindrat, esq., spent his last hour in the town. Shortly after 12 o'clock he was on board the steamboat which conveyed him to Cahaba, then the Capital of the State. Judge B. S. Bibb and John Powell are the only citizens of Montgomery at the present time who were adult white male citizens at the time of the visit of LaFayette.

The sickliest season in the entire history of Montgomery were those of the summer and fall of 1825 and 1826. Up to July, 1825, the town could boast of unprecedented health, but during the latter part of that month a most malignant type of bilious remittent and intermittent fever appeared, which seemed to baffle the best medical skill and medicines. This remained during August and September and a part of October of each of those fatal years. It has been estimated that during each of those seasons in 1825 and 1826 about one-fifth of the population of Montgomery died! The cause of the fatal epidemic was attributed to the decay of timber and other vegetable matter consequent upon the extensive clearings of land around and in the vicinity of the town. The Montgomery Republican said the immediate cause was the rotting of immense piles of cotton seed in the heart of the place.

6 On the first day of January, 1826, the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach reached the town on his tour through the United States. This was two years prior to his being succeeded as Grand Duke by his son, Charles Frederick. He came without ostentation, but our leading citizens found him out and bestowed on him proper attention. He deserved it, for he represented a Duchy in Germany distinguished as the residence of several of the German classical writers, such as Schiller, Goethe, Herder and Wieland. He remained until the 3rd, when he departed on the steamboat Hornet for Mobile.

The first Volunteer Military Company in the town was the "Montgomery Light Infantry." This was originated in 1824, by Mr. John Goldthwaite, who, notwithstanding his mercantile and other engagements, was not unmindful of the necessity and usefulness of such an organization. He had ever cherished the military spirit he exhibited as a soldier on the frontier during the war of 1812. The Light Infantry Company was incorporated by an act approved December 24, 1824, with John Goldthwaite, Captain, George Whitman, Lieutenant, and Edward W. Thompson, Ensign. The Company was publicly drilled several times each year, and never failed to have a grand parade on the 22nd of February and 4th of July. The "Montgomery Huzzars," the first cavalry company of the county, was the next volunteer military corps in Montgomery. This was commanded by Dr. H. W. Henry, and was better known as "Henry's Horse Company." It was not regularly incorporated until by act approved January 19, 1832, with H. W. Henry, Captain, Cornelius Robinson, Lieutenant, and James R. Conyers as Cornet. A portion of the members resided in the country. During the Creek Indian hostilities of 1836, Governor C. C. Clay selected this Company as his body guard.

On Monday, the first day of January, 1829, a deliberate and unprovoked murder occurred in the town. Mr. Colman Williams had come to Montgomery on that day, like hundreds of other citizens of the county, to attend the public hiring out of slaves. Just as he approached the front door of the Court House, then located at the present Artesian Basin, Mr. Silas Goree, Constable, served on him a writ for debt. Mr. Williams instantly drew his long dirk-knife from his belt and plunged it into the Constable's heart, producing immediate death. He made his way through the large crowd around, brandishing the knife, and proceeded in his escape until he reached the square immediately west of the present Methodist Protestant Church. Here, he was finally arrested by Col. John P. Dejarrette, of Autauga county, who disarmed him by knocking the knife from his hand by means of a small walking cane. The murderer managed to keep his case in the Courts for nearly three years, but was eventually tried and convicted of murder in the first degree, in the Fall Term, 1831, of the Autauga Circuit Court, whither the cause had been carried by a change of venue. He expiated his terrible crime on the public gallows, Friday, January 27, 1832, on the side of the public road east of Montgomery, near the present residence of Mr. M. W. Garrison. This constituted the first judicial hanging of a white person in Montgomery county. His remains were interred on his own land, about five miles west of Montgomery, now owned by Mr. Felix L. Ashley. Two elm trees, one at the head and the other at the foot of his grave, have grown to a large size, while there are no other elms in the vicinity.

The business of Montgomery began, at an early period, to gravitate towards Court square, in the direction of the river. This resulted from causes that are universal in their operation. The rich lands to the south, southwest and west of the town had been settled and cultivated in large quantities, and the bulk of population in the county no longer resided towards Line Creek and Fort Jackson. Warehouses had been opened near the river, convenient to the steamboats. Commercial trade naturally sought closer proximity to the steamboat transportation. Citizens, too, of the county, whose produce sought a market here, and who also laid in their supplies in the town, were unwilling to go to the extreme eastern end to transact their business. So that by the year 1830 the merchants near the Capitol square had gone down town, and the business was concentrated upon Court square and the four squares fronting on Market street below Lawrence street. Mr. Falconer, the Postmaster, began to remove his Post Office building down to Commerce street, to be more convenient to the centre of population. A considerable increase had taken place in the population of Montgomery, attracted by the increase of business resulting from a settlement of all portions of the county and the trade drawn from surrounding counties. At that period, it was estimated at one thousand or twelve hundred.

Three of the Christian denominations succeeded in organizing Churches in Montgomery during the latter part of 1829. The Methodist Episcopalians organized September 15, with ten members. At first, they worshipped in the edifice built for all denominations, which was relinquished to them in 1830. Their first Church edifice was dedicated March 1, 1835, by their Pastor, the Rev. H. W. Hilliard, now U. S. Minister in Brazil. The present elegant and commodious edifice was dedicated March 3, 1856, by Bishop Geo. F. Pierce. Their church lot was donated to them in May, 1832, by the "Alabama Company." The Presbyterians organized November 12th of the same year, with twelve members. On that occasion, William Sayre and John Taylor were elected Elders and set apart for ordination. The present church lot, on Adams, between Court and Perry streets, was purchased and an edifice erected, which was dedicated November, 1831. The present brick edifice was dedicated February 21, 1847. The Baptist Church was organized November 29, 1829, by a Presbytery composed of Elders Lee Compere and Fields Bradshaw, with only four members. Another organization took place August 11, 1832, with nineteen members. Their first edifice was dedicated in 1832, and the present large and beautiful one in May, 1854. Their church lot, Fractional Square 29, was a present from Mr. John Gindrat.

Early in January, 1830, a new paper appeared in Montgomery under the title of the "Planters Gazette," to battle against the doctrine of the South Carolina Nullifiers. It was published by E. W. Thompson, who had published the "Republican," the first newspaper of the town, and James E. Belser, esq., conducted the editorial department. It was changed, three years afterwards, in name, to the "Montgomery Advertiser," and the publication has continued ever since.

In 1831, Mr. Caleb Tompkins began the construction of a four-story framed Hotel on lot twelve, on the north side of Market street. This structure, which fronted fifty feet, and extended back one hundred feet, was completed in about two years and called the "Merchants' Hotel." It was under the management of Oliver Reed until his death, and afterwards that of his widow. The building was totally destroyed in the great fire of May, 1846, but had ceased as a hotel for some time previously.

In 1832, a Company, of which George Whitman was President, commenced the erection of the "Montgomery Hall." The contractor was John Crane, who finished the structure in about three years. The original cost of the lots and building was fifty thousand dollars. It was opened for the accommodation of the public in the fall of 1835, by Benjamin Wilson and John Black.

In 1833, Mr. Abner McGehee, a wealthy planter, became smitten with the mania for hotel-building in Montgomery, and began the erection of the "Planters' Hotel." This hotel was a two-story brick building that fronted sixty feet on Court square and extended two hundred feet up Montgomery street. It was first kept by Daddison Powell, sr., father of Col. James R. Powell, who was succeeded by Hardy Herbert and Patrick N. Madigan. These latter parties were running it when it was destroyed by fire on the night of December 16, 1838.

Beginning with 1831, the Educational advantages of Montgomery began to be improved. Mr. James Lyon, a highly educated Englishman, opened a School in the old brick house corner of Commerce and Tallapoosa streets. He taught with remarkable success for several years, and then removed to Benton, Lowndes county, where he died. Mr. A. S. Vigus, from one of the New England Universities, succeeded, by the spring of 1833, in erecting an excellent brick school house, the "Franklin Institute," on Columbus street, between Perry and Court streets. Few teachers anywhere succeeded so well in the rapid and thorough proficiency of their pupils and were so thorough in discipline. He was well provided with a Cabinet of Minerals, and frequently, through the winters, delivered free lectures with interesting experiments. About 1836, he changed base to the "Barton Academy," in Mobile, and afterwards to Citronelle, on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad. Rev. Stephen R. Wright was one of his able successors in the "Franklin Institute."

In 1833, Mr. Peter Maher, another eminent teacher, removed from Valley Creek Academy, near Summerfield, to Montgomery, and pursued his profession until his death in the Spring of 1838. He was a graduate of Dublin University, and had been educated for Clerical Orders in the Catholic Church. His estimable and accomplished wife taught a High School for girls and young ladies.

In July, 1832, the Branch of the State Bank of Alabama was put into operation in Montgomery, with John Gindrat, President, Hezekiah W. Cater, Cashier, and Joseph E. Estabrook, Teller. This Branch was established under act approved January 21, 1832, and to raise the necessary funds, the State sold a half million of dollars of its Bonds in Europe. It did business at first in a brick building on Commerce street, below the present Exchange Hotel, but was removed the next fall to a regular bank building, erected at the intersection of Court and Washington streets, now known as "Arnold's Corner." The unwonted money facilities afforded by the bank induced a large extension of business and engendered a wild spirit of speculation, whereby Montgomery for several years enjoyed a high degree of prosperity. Real estate went up to fabulous prices, and no scheme seemed too chimerical to her bold, enterprising citizens. Merchants and traders pushed their commodities upon customers, who were allowed their own time to settle. Cotton and other productions ruled high, and every body anticipated a millenium of prosperity.

The land office for the sale of the Creek Indian lands, acquired by treaty, was opened in Montgomery on the 31st of July, 1832, with N. E. Benson, Receiver, and John H. Somerville, Register. This marked an important epoch in East Alabama, carrying a rush of emigration to purchase and settle on those valuable tracts. It led to the speedy settlement of Coosa, Tallapoosa, Talladega, Macon, Russell, Barbour, Chambers and Randolph counties.

Railroad connection with the Chattahoochee river was projected under a charter dated January 20th, 1832. The "Montgomery Railroad Company" selected Mr. Brice Battle as Topographical Engineer, who, in November, 1832, reported the distance to West Point, Georgia, as seventy-six miles, and the cost of constructing the Railroad $8,000 per mile. Under a subsequent charter, dated January 15, 1834, the Company was reorganized and went to work in earnest. The first ground was broke on the 2d of February, 1836, on Mr. Brack's land near the town, with thirty or forty hands, by the contractors, Messrs. John Scott and Abner McGehee. The work of construction was seriously retarded by the financial crisis that soon came upon the whole country.

The Company, however, managed to have twelve miles open by June, 1840, and thirty-three miles, to Franklin, by the following November. The road was not completed to West Point until May 1st, 1851.

In the Spring of 1833 occurred the highest freshet in the Alabama river at this place ever known to the white inhabitants. The highest point was reached on the 20th of March, when the water came into the dwelling of Dr. James Clifton, at the foot of Coosa street, who was compelled to resort to the ferry flat to remove his family and effects. A large portion of the cotton stored in a warehouse on the north side of Water street was carried down the river; and the water flooded the warehouses on the south side of the same street. Very remarkable freshets have occurred here, eleven years apart, namely—in 1822, 1833, 1844, 1855, and 1866; but last year, 1877, the next eleven year period, none put in an appearance.

On the 1st of July, 1834, Mr. Neil Blue succeeded the first Post Master of the town. This position he held through successive administrations until July, 1849, when he was removed by President Taylor, for political reasons entirely. His service in the Post Office at Montgomery as Clerk and Post Master, extended over a period of thirty-seven years. Mr. Blue resigned the position of Discount Clerk in the Branch Bank, to which he was elected November 13, 1833, to return to the Post Office.

The reputation of the town suffered on account of the lawlessness that was allowed to prevail. The sporting gentry, many of them not of the better class, contributed largely to this state of affairs. These had their rendezvous at the "Montgomery Exchange," the present location of the "Kentucky Whisky House" of the Messrs. Lucius. At this bar room and gambling den, altercations and street fights of the most serious character were of frequent, if not daily occurrence. At times good, peaceable citizens, who had spoken out their sentiments against lawlessness, were insulted or attacked. It seemed for some time that the worst element of the community had the upper hand, and kept the balance in constant awe. The town authorities appeared powerless, being unable to preserve order or protect the lives of the citizens. The first effective check to the ruling bad element was had under the leadership of Col. John H. Thorington, whose property, as well as that of others, had been damaged. Col. Thorington, at the head of a few hundred citizens, marched to the "Montgomery Exchange" and arrested Isaac Ticknor and John Tittle, the ringleaders, and had them bound over to keep the peace. The next happy riddance to the community of this dangerous class occurred when about forty of them left in Capt. Ticknor's Company to aid the struggling Texan Colonists, early in 1836.

Two more Churches were dedicated during 1834 in Montgomery. Rev. Dr. L. F. W. Andrews, recently deceased in Macon, Georgia, settled here in 1833, and early in 1834 established a monthly Universalist paper. He succeeded in organizing a Universalist Society, which had a Church edifice erected at the corner of Perry and Alabama streets, which was dedicated on the 15th of June. Dr. Andrews was the Pastor as long as the Society existed, a period of about two years. He removed to Columbus, Georgia, where he established the "Muscogee Democrat," and afterwards the "Georgia Citizen" at Macon.

The few Catholics in the town succeeded in erecting a small neat Church edifice, which was consecrated on the 25th of April, 1834, by Bishop Portier, of Mobile, and Rev. G. Cholon installed as Priest. Edward Hanrick generously donated the eligible lots at the corner of Adams and Lawrence streets. The present neat brick Church was built while Father A. D. Pellicer, now Bishop at Brownsville, Texas, was Priest of the Parish, and dedicated by Bishop Timon, of New Orleans. Two of the Priests of this Church have been promoted to a Bishopric, namely: Pellicer and A. Manuey.

The Episcopalians of the town organized a Church January 9, 1834, the first step in that direction being taken December 20th previous. A neat brick Church edifice was erected by September, 1837, which was dedicated by Right Rev. Bishop Jackson Kempa April 8, 1838. On the 2nd of December, 1855, the present splendid edifice at the corner of Madison and Perry streets was dedicated by the Right Rev. Bishop N. H. Cobbs, of the Diocese of Alabama.

The citizens of Montgomery exhibited a deep interest in the success of the Texans in their efforts for independence from Mexico. After several public meetings and the contribution of pecuniary aid, Isaac Ticknor succeeded, early in December, 1835, in enlisting a Company, which went to Texas, all of whom perished in the Massacre of Col. Fannin's Command after surrender, March, 1836. The following is a correct list of the officers and members, viz:

Captain Ticknor's Company, 1st Regiment Texas Volunteers—Memory B. Tatum, 1st Lieutenant; William A. Smith, 2nd Lieutenant; Edmond Patterson, 1st Sergeant; Nicholas B. Waters, 2nd Sergeant; Richard Rutledge, 3rd Sergeant; Samuel C. Pitman, 4th Sergeant; Joseph B. Tatum, 1st Corporal; James C. Jack, 2nd Corporal; Perry Reese, 3rd Corporal; Thomas Rieves, 4th Corporal; Thomas Weston, Musician.

Privates.—D. Greene, John McGowan, David Johnson,

Samuel Wood, W. Welsh, Isaac N. Wright, William L. Alison, Washington Mitchell, Stephen Baker, Henry Hasty, James A. Bradford, Cornelius Rooney, Seaborn A. Mills, Cullen Conard, James O. Young, Edward Fitzsimmons, Hezekiah Fist, C. F. Hick, O. F. Leverett, William Comstock, John O'Daniel, Charles Lantz, Evans M. Thomas, A. M. Lynch, G. W. Carlisle, Levin Allen, Jesse Harris, Swords Williams, and William P. B. Dubose. Mr. Edward Wingate had joined Capt. Wadsworth's Company, although he left Montgomery in Capt. Ticknor's Company.

Montgomery responded promptly to the call for volunteers for the Seminole War in Florida. About the 25th of February, 1836, two Companies departed for the scene of hostilities, one from the town, "True Blues," commanded by Captain Richard T. Nott, and the one from the county, by Captain John Bonham. They reached home on return, May 15th, and were heartily welcomed at the steamboat landing by a very large crowd of citizens, Sunday although it was. The only engagement in which they participated was that of Clonotosassa, fought on the 27th of April. J. H. Evans of the "Blues" was killed, and James Sankey badly wounded; and James Vickers of the other Company was slightly wounded. William Stewart of the former Company died of disease, March 12th, and Mr. Underwood of the latter on the 24th of March. It is believed that only two members of the "True Blues" who served in that campaign still survive, namely, Capt. John Clisby of Coosa county, and Washington Tilley of Washington City. The organization of the "True Blues," a company so long the just pride of Montgomery, was kept up until the close of the late civil war. The succession of Captains was as follows: Richard T. Nott, Robert A. Means, Joseph E. Estabrook, James L. Mumford, John R. Rodgers, Joel Riggs, David Owen, John N. Perkins, and W. Green Andrews.

By act approved December 23, 1837, Montgomery was chartered as a CITY. At the first election thereafter, held January 14, 1838, the following officers were chosen, to wit: Samuel D. Holt, Mayor; Neil Blue and Samuel Q. Hale, Aldermen in Ward 1; Lewis Owen and Benjamin G. Lathrop in Ward 2, and William McCall and Thomas Goodman in Ward 3. During that year, J. D. Randolph was elected in place of Mr. Goodman, who had died. The Board elected Clark M. Stone, Marshall, Mosely Hooker, Clerk, and Geo. W. Noble, Treasurer.

The town responded at once for the suppression of Creek

Indian hostilities. On the reception of the news of hostilities, which arrived May 10th, a public meeting was held without delay, when two Companies were organized. The "Montgomery Guards," under Captain George Whitman, departed the next morning for the Nation. The hostilities were so speedily suppressed that the "boys" from this place had no opportunity to show their metal.

The Financial Panic that convulsed the whole country, beginning in 1837, produced unwonted depression in Montgomery, as elsewhere. All classes, citizens of town and county, planters, merchants, professional men, all had been drawn into the maelstrom of speculation, and pay day found them unprepared. The Branch Bank was compelled to suspend specie payments and the discount of paper, thus rendering the disaster more complete and terrible. Amazement and horror were depicted on all countenances. Nearly every one could exclaim, like Satan in Milton's "Paradise Lost," "Which way I fly is Hell, myself am Hell." Measures of relief were passed by the General Assembly, but these were only temporary subterfuges, leaving the recipients worse in the end. The dockets of the Courts groaned under the civil suits, and the voice of the Sheriffs was a constant and most familiar sound, crying off the property of all classes involved in the universal ruin. All property and all kinds of business in Montgomery were paralyzed, which did not recover for several years. An improved tone began to appear under the operations of the Bankrupt Law of 1841.

In August, 1837, a desperate and fatal rencounter occurred at the Montgomery Hall, between Kenyon Mooney and his father on one side, and Bushrod W. Bell, sr., and his nephews, Edward W. Bell and Bushrod Bell, jr., on the other side. The result was that the elder Mooney was killed with a bowie knife by Bushrod Bell, jr., and E. W. Bell was mortally wounded in the neck by Kenyon Mooney, while the latter was slightly wounded in the arm by a pistol in the hands of E. W. Bell. The unfortunate affair grew out of the killing of Mr. Thomas Mastin of this county, in November, 1836, by Mr. E. W. Bell, who was acquitted at the next Spring term of the Circuit Court for the county.

On Sunday night, December 16, 1838, the city of Montgomery was visited by the most extensive and destructive fire in its history, up to that period. It originated in the "Alabama Journal" printing office, then on the present location of the retail store of Goetter, Weil & Co., No. 6

Court square. It spread up Court square and Court street and down to and up Montgomery street, until exhausted for want of inflammable material. Not a tenement was left standing as high up as No. 30 Court street. The "Planters' Hotel," at the corner of Court square and Montgomery street, was the most valuable building destroyed. This had cost the owner, Mr. Abner McGehee, about forty or fifty thousand dollars, upon which, too, there was no insurance. At that period, there was no Fire Department and no means of extinguishing fire except by the old-fashioned leathern buckets passed up and down long lines of persons in double rows.

The "Montgomery Academy," now the chief Free School building, was erected, in 1840, for the use of Township 16 of Range 17, of which Neil Blue, Wade Allen and Charles L. Gilmer were the 16th Section Commissioners. Enoch L. Childs, esq., of New Hampshire, a graduate of Yale College of the class of 1840, was selected as Principal, who opened it early in January, 1841, and remained in charge of it for about six years. No teacher of this city ever commanded equal respect and deference from his pupils, or succeeded better in their proficiency. He now resides at Concord, New Hampshire, in the 70th year of his age.

The Methodist Protestants of Montgomery erected a small but neat brick Church edifice during 1842. This was dedicated on Sunday, October 30th, of that year, Rev. Dr. Hill of Greensboro delivering the dedicatory sermon. The Church was then re-constituted with ten members, and Rev. A. A. Lipscomb installed as Pastor, which relation continued for several years. This denomination first organized a Society here about 1830, and built a Church edifice on Coosa street between Bibb and Tallapoosa streets, which was consumed by fire April 28th, 1834. The edifice of 1842, enlarged and beautified since the summer of 1877, was dedicated April 7 of the present year, Rev. A. A. Lipscomb of the Vanderbilt University officiating.

Early in 1843, principally through the efforts of Mr. Childs of the Montgomery Academy, Rev. A. A. Lipscomb and Col. Francis Bugbee, a Lyceum Association and a Library Association was formed. Weekly free lectures were delivered by leading citizens, which afforded much instruction and entertainment. The opening lecture of the series was by Rev. A. A. Lipscomb, Pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church, the theme being "American Mind."

The Library room was the rear room on the second floor over the present drug store of Messrs. Irvine, Garside and Alexander. A valuable assortment of books were purchased and donated, and the Library for a short period was a successful institution, but it was unfortunately allowed to languish and enter the record of "things that were."

Henry Clay, the great "American Commoner," who was on a tour through the Southern States, arrived by steamboat from Mobile, on the morning of March 8, 1844. Notwithstanding the torrents of rain, a vast concourse of people from the city and county was at the landing to greet him. Mr. Clay appreciated the hearty welcome, and among other expressions remarked: "Fellow citizens, I perceive that you are no dry weather friends." He was escorted to a warehouse at the corner of Coosa and Water streets, the present location of the Cotton Compress, where he entertained the vast audience in his characteristic eloquent and felicitous style. He tarried two days, and departed for Columbus, Georgia. Madam Octavia Walton Levert, the distinguished Southern authoress and literateur, accompanied him.

The removal of the State Capital to Montgomery, at the session of the General Assembly of 1845-46, was the most important event for her advancement and prosperity. The news of the action of the Legislature was received on the 30th of January, 1846, by the Selma stage. Such universal and hearty rejoicing had never taken place in the city. Real estate owners very naturally congratulated themselves upon the consequent enhancement of their property, while all classes were justified in anticipating increased prosperity. At last, after nearly thirty years, the prophecy of Mr. Dexter, the founder of the city, was to be fulfilled. A State Capitol building was soon under contract, the City issuing bonds to the amount of $75,000 for its construction. These bonds, at the suggestion of Col. Charles T. Pollard, were immediately taken by some of the principal owners of real estate and capitalists. The plan of the new Capitol was drawn by Stephen D. Button, and the contract awarded to Messrs. B. F. Robinson and R. N. R. Bardwell, who completed it in time for the session of 1847-48. On the 2nd of July, 1847, the inside upper portion of the hall of the House of Representatives suddenly fell, whereby Mr. Jacob Ghents and two other mechanics lost their lives. This State Capitol was destroyed by fire on the 14th of December, 1849. A suitable appropriation was promptly made by the Legislature, then in session, whereby the present Capitol was constructed and ready for the next session, in November, 1851. During W. H. Smith's administration, several important improvements were made, which added convenience and beauty to several of the rooms on the lower floor.

The citizens of Montgomery responded with their characteristic zeal and promptness for the late war with Mexico. As soon as the news of the battles of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma was received, a public meeting was held looking to aid for General Zachary Taylor. General Rush Elmore raised a full Company in an incredibly short time, under General Gaines' call for volunteers, and hastened to the Rio Grande. The "Montgomery True Blues," under Captain J. L. Mumford, also followed to Mobile, where an Alabama regiment was to be organized. Owing to disagreements and other causes, the Blues returned home, while Captain Mumford went to Mexico and eventually died in August, 1847, at Tampico, of yellow fever. Col. J. J. Seibels of Montgomery raised a Battalion, which was stationed at Orizaba. Quite a number of our young men went to the scene of operations and united with various commands. It is a matter of regret that a copy of the roll of Gen. Elmore's Company of Seibel's Battalion cannot be obtained for this publication, owing to a singular regulation at the War Department in Washington City.

A mania for Hotel building seized the capitalists, which caused the erection of the Exchange Hotel, Madison House and the Dexter House. They were believed to be necessary to provide accommodations for the growing wants of the community and the influx of strangers during the sessions of the General Assembly.

The Exchange Hotel, at the corner of Montgomery and Commerce streets, was erected by a Company composed of Messrs. Charles T. Pollard, Charles Crommelin, Francis M. Gilmer, jr., William Taylor, and others. The contractors were Messrs. Robinson and Bardwell, contractors at the same period for the State Capitol. The architect was Samuel Holt. The work was commenced in the summer of 1846, and the hotel ready for use just prior to the meeting of the Legislature in November, 1847. It was opened by J. J. Stewart, who, in September, 1850, associated with him Mr. Joseph G. Field. In September, 1852, Mr. Washington Tilley took charge of the hotel upon the retirement of Mr. Stewart on account of ill health. In 1855, Messrs. St.

Lanier & Son succeeded Mr. Tilley, and also took charge of the Montgomery Hall. Shortly afterwards, they associated Mr. A. P. Watt with them. During the latter half of the late war, this hotel was under the management of Messrs. Bulger, Hukill & Co. After the war, the latter was succeeded by A. P. Watt & Co. (A. F. Givan). The present proprietors, Messrs. C. A. Lanier and R. L. Watt took charge in January, 1872. Few hotels have sustained as high a reputation, well constructed, well officered, and complete in all of the appointments. At the session of 1849-50, the charter of the "Planters' Hotel Company" was diverted in behalf of the "Exchange Hotel Company."

The Madison House was built during 1847, by Robert E. Coxe, who had purchased the location shortly prior to the great fire of May, 1846. It was opened by Mr. Charles Abercrombie just before the assembling of the Legislature in November, 1847. Mr. Washington Tilly was his successor. After the late war, it was conducted by Joseph Pizzala as the "European House." The present proprietor, Mr. Sidney Kirtland, took charge on the first of October, 1877.

Col. Lewis Owen had the "Dexter House" erected during 1847, and in the name perpetuated the name of the founder of Montgomery. It was opened by Mr. Jacob P. House of Autauga county, who was succeeded by the father of Dr. J. M. Sims and William Taylor. For many years it has been only a private boarding house.

On the night of May 1st, 1846, Montgomery was visited by its second destructive fire. It originated in the store of Mr. Hugh M. Farrier, No. 49 Market street, and swept every building down to Perry street, including the large "Merchants' Hotel" adjoining. The heat was so intense that, notwithstanding the width of Market street, 140 feet, the houses on the opposite side were only saved as by a miracle. This fire, like others that have occurred here, was a blessing in disguise, because substantial brick structures were erected in the stead of the old wooden tenements destroyed.

In the spring of 1846, Messrs. John C. Riddle and David H. Carter established a Horse Express between Mobile and Montgomery, which conveyed intelligence twenty-four hours in advance of the regular mail. This was continued for two years, or until telegraphic communication with Mobile was opened. It was very useful in bringing late intelligence from the army in Mexico, for the Press and official dispatches for the War Department. The proprietors had a heavy contract with certain papers in Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York. The late Fred Tyler was the rider on the occasion of bringing through news of the battles of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma, being compelled, too, to open the stables and bridle and saddle his horses. He made the extraordinary ride within twelve hours. It was commented on by sporting journals in England, where many said it was too incredible for belief. The proposition of Messrs. Riddle & Carter to wager $10,000 that Tyler would make the trip again in less time, about ten hours, was never accepted.

Appropriate honors were awarded to Generals Quitman and Shields, when they reached Montgomery en route from the battle-fields of Mexico. The latter arrived December 10, 1847, by the steamer Daniel Pratt, from Mobile, and was escorted to the Montgomery Hall by the Grand Lodge of A. Y. Masons. In front of the Hall, Col. William L. Yancey delivered the welcome speech in his felicitous style. The next day, the General was appropriately received by both branches of the General Assembly. On the 17th of December, just a week afterwards, General James Quitman arrived also, by the Daniel Pratt and was welcomed by Col. Yancey on the part of the city. He, too, was properly received at the State Capitol by each House of the Assembly. On each of these occasions, the universal and hearty demonstrations reminded old citizens of the demonstrations when General LaFayette arrived nearly twenty-three years previously.

The destruction of the State Capitol on Friday, the 14th of December, 1849, was a great calamity, and produced universal gloom among the citizens. The fire was discovered about 1½ o'clock p. m., while the two Houses of the General Assembly were in session. The flames were issuing from the roof, and within a few hours nothing of the beautiful and costly structure was left but the walls. The furniture in a damaged condition, and most of the archives were rescued and saved. From some strange over-sight, there was no insurance on the building. Suitable rooms were provided at the Exchange Hotel, so that there was scarcely any interruption to legislative business. The friends of Montgomery, however, were compelled to work hard to secure an appropriation for re-building, but they were successful against the strenuous efforts and appeals of the friends of Tuscaloosa, the former Capital. The origin of the fire has ever been an unsolved mystery. The late John Bloodworth Taylor once proposed to ferret it out, provided the indictments against him for gaming in this county were nol. prossed and he allowed to return to his old home.

In 1850 commenced the mania for Plank Roads among our enterprising capitalists. Companies were at once organized and construction began, resulting in the completion of the "Central Plank Road" to Winterboro, in Talladega county, and a small portion of the "South Plank Road." The theory, as presented by the earnest advocates, was plausible in the extreme, but experience in this section did not bear it out. In this movement, Col. John G. Winter of the St. Mary's Bank was the leading spirit, to whom also the city was indebted for the establishment of the extensive "Winter Iron Works" and the extensive "Montgomery Mills."

It was not until 1850 that steps were taken to carry the heavy Grocery business down on Commerce street, which seemed to be its natural location. Its advantages of proximity to the steamboat landing, and ultimately to the railroads, had been strangely overlooked. A few old-fashioned stores had existed there from the early days, but the amount of business transacted was inconsiderable and fluctuating. Now, a new spirit began to prevail, and the example of Col. James W. Pryor was immediately followed. The heavy business at once gravitated in that direction, where it is transacted at the present time. In consequence, Market street, so long the principal business centre, has continued to decline, while Court square and Commerce street have largely monopolized the trade of the city.

Railroad connection with the Gulf and Mobile was a topic of interest for many years, but the first steps in that direction of a practical nature were not taken until 1853. On the 3rd of May, a meeting of the stockholders of the "Alabama and Florida Railroad" was held at the Exchange Hotel. Col. Thomas J. Judge was elected President, and Col. Samuel G. Jones, Chief Engineer. A survey was at once made of a satisfactory character, and application to Congress for a donation of land, which was successful. On the 27th of June, 1854, a vote was held on the proposition of a subscription of $500,000 by the city of Montgomery to the stock of that road. This resulted as follows: in favor, 18,171; against, 650; real estate owners alone voting, and one vote allowed for each hundred dollars of real estate. The city bonds, however, were never issued, and the subscription was not consummated. The work of construction progressed slowly, so that the road was not finished until shortly after the commencement of the late civil war.

The construction of the Montgomery and Eufaula Railroad was commenced in 1860, with Col. Lewis Owen as President and John Gray as Civil Engineer, the latter having surveyed the route at his own expense. Only a few miles were completed, when the late war came on and the work ceased. A locomotive named John H. Murphy was put upon the track on the 16th of September, 1860. After the war, Col. Owen re-commenced the work, in the face of heavy obstacles, and labored on, with assistance from the city, and "State aid," until the road was completed in 1871, securing to Montgomery a long-desired and most important railroad connection with the Chattahoochee river at Eufaula. This road now is part of the favorite route to East Florida.

The construction of the South and North Alabama Railroad was begun before the late war, with F. M. Gilmer, jr., as President, and Col. John T. Milner as Chief Engineer. The preliminary survey of the route was executed by the latter under an appropriation made by the General Assembly for that purpose. Subscriptions to a limited extent were obtained all along the route, and a contract entered into with the "Mountain Railroad Contracting Company" for the grading. Under the act "to loan out and appropriate the Three per cent. fund and its interest," approved February, 1860, about $800,000 were to accrue to the enterprise after a period of five years. The work, however, dragged slowly, so that at the close of the late civil war only about twenty miles were completed and ready for use. The city of Montgomery came up manfully in 1866, and subscribed $500,000 to the capital stock, and paid over the proceeds of the sale of her bonds to the Company. It was, however, by the liberal endorsement of $22,000 per mile by the State, secured at the session of 1869-70, that the Company was enabled to complete the entire road to Decatur, on the Tennessee river, in October, 1872.

The project of a railroad to Selma, to place Montgomery in connection with the railroads west of that city, received some action prior to the war, but nothing of importance was really effected. It was, however, taken hold of in earnest by the Montgomery and West Point Railroad, backed by the Central Railroad of Georgia, and pushed speedily forward to completion, and that, too, without individual, city, county, or State assistance.

On the 7th day of January, 1861, the State Convention assembled, under the proclamation of Governor Andrew B. Moore, to take such steps as the election of Abraham Lincoln to the Presidency demanded. The delegates from Montgomery county, elected December 24, 1860, were Cols. William L. Yancey and Thomas H. Watts, sr. Judge William M. Brooks of Perry county was elected President of the Convention, over Robert Jamison, jr., of Tuscaloosa, the Co-operation candidate, by a vote of 52 to 48. On Friday, January 11th, the Ordinance of Secession was adopted and proclaimed to the world. This was hailed with unwonted acclamations by all the citizens and sojourners. Business was suspended, the bells of the city rang for hours, cannon fired, and harangues to the people at the Capitol. Whatever difference of opinion existed heretofore with regard to immediate or co operative secession, there was soon a cordial unanimity on the point of standing by the action of the Convention. All were ready to pledge their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor, to maintain the separate and independent relation of Alabama to the Federal Government. Measures were at once inaugurated to prepare the State for her new position. Governor Moore had in advance, but in anticipation, of the Ordinance of Secession, sent troops to seize the Arsenal at Mt. Vernon, and also Fort Morgan, Alabama, also co-operated with Florida in seizing the Navy Yard at Warrenton and Forts Barrancas and McRae. The then existing Volunteer Military Companies of Montgomery took part in that seizure.

Montgomery will always enjoy the distinction of having been the first Capital of the Southern Confederacy. Here, on the 4th day of February, 1861, delegates from six seceding States assembled to organize the Government of the Confederate States. Here the new Constitution was framed and adopted. Here, on the 18th of February, on the front steps of the State Capitol, Jefferson Davis was inaugurated as President, and Alexander H. Stephens, Vice-President. Here the new government in all of its departments was put into successful operation. President Davis occupied the fine residence on the southwest corner of Washington and Bibb streets, which was dubbed the "White House." The Central Bank of the city came forward promptly and loaned the Confederate Government a half million dollars in its notes.

During the whole period of the war, Montgomery was one of the most conspicuous cities in the South. From the beginning, it became an important depot and distributing point for troops and supplies of ammunition and provisions. If the Capital had not been transferred to Richmond, General Scott's prediction would doubtless have been verified, that Alabama would be the cock pit of the war, and that the fiercest struggles would rage around Montgomery. Only once, however, was the city seriously threatened prior to Wilson's raid, and that was on the 16th day of July, 1864. The day previous, the news came that General Rousseau's Cavalry was heading for this point. Sunday, the 16th, was a stirring day in Montgomery, when preparations were being made for the reception of that Federal command. Fortunately, however, General Rousseau struck the Western Railroad thirty-odd miles eastward.

The stirring events of the late civil war are still so fresh in the recollection of the present generation, that it is needless to recur to them at length. It would require a volume to recount the deeds of the representatives of Montgomery alone. No city in the entire Southern Confederacy was more prompt, none more liberal in the contribution of brave, gallant, devoted men and none more untiring in its efforts to uphold the honor and secure the independence of the South. When the first tocsin of war was sounded, her noble sons sprang to arms, and up to the last call for brave hearts for the field, the small remnant at home rushed to fill up the depleted ranks. Lifeless and maimed forms of her noble soldiers were always found after each severe conflict in which they participated. Many slept that last sleep upon the bloody field where they fought their last battle. These, in a nobler cause, could send back the immortal language of the Spartan band at Thermapolæ, "Stranger, go to Lacedæmon and tell that we died in obedience to her laws." On mountain tops, on hill sides, in valleys, on rivers, and in the Confederate cemeteries of the South, and even in Northern soil, their sacred dust will repose until the trump of Resurrection is sounded. Not a few of their surviving comrades, in their mutilated limbs, still bear about their persons enduring memorials of the colossal war of the nineteenth century. Certain, indeed, when the South makes up her jewels, Montgomery will shine in that resplendant crown of glory.

General Wilson came in with his cavalry on the 12th of April, 1865, and remained about one week. General Buford, Confederate officer commanding, although with a considerable force of Alabama Militia from adjoining counties, evacuated Montgomery on the morning of the day previous. Cotton bales had been hauled from the warehouses, with which barricades had been made in all the principal streets on the outer edges. General Buford was convinced that his command was entirely inadequate for defense, and besides, he would save the city from bombardment and pillage. He did all that was possible to remove the Confederate stores beyond the reach of the invaders. While General Wilson remained, no material damage to the persons and property of the citizens occurred. He hearkened to the advice and earnest request of Col. Seibels and others, and maintained excellent discipline and order. Some of the soldiers and camp followers acted in a disgraceful manner, but these were, however, exceptions. The Federal General and his command departed eastward through Tuskegee to Columbus, Georgia. The track on a part of the route was marked by burning gin houses, done, however, it was contended, by stragglers, and not the regular force.

Cotton, amounting to eighty-eight thousand bales, was totally consumed by fire in the warehouses, to prevent its falling into the hands of the Federal army. Sad, indeed, was the disappointment to Wilson and his command that such a rich prize had been wrested from them. The owners of the cotton cheerfully, in most instances, consented to the destruction of their cotton, in which many of them had their all invested. General Wilson's troops also got up bonfires in the matter of burning Mr. Janney's foundry works and the Confederate workshops. It was really remarkable, that no other houses or property was burned besides what each party intended to destroy.

On the 24th of April, 1865, General Smith, with his large force, reached the city and took possession. A few days after, General Steele's forces also arrived, but did not remain long. The colored troops of the latter command gave such offense to our citizens, that it became absolutely necessary to remove them across the river, opposite, and not long afterwards they were sent away.

On the 19th of July, Lewis E. Parsons of Talladega, who had received the appointment of Provisional Governor of Alabama, issued his proclamation and entered upon his high duties. A State Convention was called for by him, which assembled in this city in September, over which Governor Fitzpatrick presided. In December, a Legislature just elected met in Montgomery, when R. M. Patton was installed as Governor.

As soon in the summer as all restrictions were removed and freedom allowed to business of all kinds, an animated revival of trade and traffic began. The old merchants and grocers, reinforced by numerous others, soon had large stocks of goods in the market. Cotton ruled high, reaching fifty cents per pound, making money plenty, and inducing large purchases by the people of articles to which the blockade had rendered them almost entire strangers for four years. The streets of the city were constantly crowded, and a new era of prosperity seemed to have dawned.

Early in 1866 the ladies of Montgomery organized a Memorial Association, of which the venerable Mrs. Judge B. S. Bibb was most fitly chosen President, and the late Mrs. Judge John D. Phelan, first Vice-President. Mrs. Bibb has ever continued at the head, coming up at all times to the full measure of her duty. Reposing in their last resting place, in a portion of our beautiful City Cemetery, were eight hundred Confederate soldiers, whose lives had been freely and generously yielded up for the cause they loved with a mother's love for her offspring. Their graves had been neglected amid the stirring scenes of the war more immediately engrossing the attention of the living. The frail head-boards had been allowed to rot down, leaving these graves almost undistinguished from the earth around. The Association had among its objects the replacing of something more substantial to mark these sacred spots and point out to all visitors the sepultures of the noble sons of the South. Its highest and most pleasing and patriotic object, however, was to establish the custom of returning annually in the spring and decorating these graves with wreaths of beautiful flowers. It would thus exhibit to the world a tender, pious regard and appreciation of the virtues and services of our gallant and heroic dead. This goodly practice has ever been maintained upon the recurrence of Memorial day in April, and doubtless will not soon fall into disuse. All classes, all sexes, all ages vie with each other in proceeding to the Confederate Cemetery and strewing garlands upon the graves of our dead soldiers. The gifted orator always comes to pay eloquent and worthy tribute to those silent heroes sleeping the sleep of death. No occasion, no theme could be more inspiring, or better calculated to excite the imagination and call forth such hearty, fervid eloquence in grand patriotic strains. Montgomery has never failed, and doubtless never will fail in a suitable orator for each occasion. All, thus far, have come up to the demands of the day, and well merited the hearty applause and high encomiums accorded to them. It would appear invidious to institute a comparison of their relative merits. Still, without invidiousness or disparagement, it is due to Major Thomas G. Jones to assert the truth, that his Memorial oration in 1874 has secured to him a National reputation, of which an older person might well be proud; unexpected, and, therefore, more gratifying. It seems that this gallant and gifted soldier of the Confederacy struck a responsive chord in the breasts of Federal soldiers throughout the North and West. His address, happily conceived and felicitously expressed, evoked a hearty endorsement and commendation from the soldiers of the Union. Besides the praise bestowed by the Northern press, and in numerous private letters, he has been the recipient of more substantial testimonials from patriotic survivors of the Union army. On the 6th of September last, at a re-union of soldiers in Marietta, Ohio, a beautiful gold medal was presented to him bearing among the inscriptions the following: "We can bequeath our children nobler legacies than discord and hate." "Honor to noble foes is the warrior's highest courage." "From Union soldiers to Maj. T. G. Jones, late C. S. A., for manly words spoken on Memorial day, April 27, 1874, in Montgomery, Alabama." In accepting the present, he declared that it had but little personal significance. "and though the soldier's hand has tendered me this beautiful gift, that hand is reached out to Alabama; this generous greeting is not to me—it is the voice of Ohio speaking to Alabama."

For several years past, Montgomery has suffered severely under the depression that has pervaded the whole United States. Business of all kinds has lamentably decreased, and real estate shrunk to less than one-third of its former value. Hence the exceeding hard struggle with all classes to support themselves even moderately. The turn in the long lane, that seemed to have no turn, is now believed to have been reached. Confidence is becoming restored, and the future shows silver lining in the clouds. With the motto "Resurgomus," the citizens of Montgomery hope to go forward and achieve greater prosperity in the future than she ever had in ante-bellum years.

I DO NOT CLAIM THE TITLE OF DOCTOR. I AM PLAIN LYMAN BROWN.—The "Society of Friends" (commonly called Quakers) do not recognize the right of one man to confer upon another a title of any kind. Therefore I make no claim to be called "doctor"—notwithstanding I have devoted my whole life to the study of the diseases of mankind. I would prefer to have my friends address me simply as LYMAN BROWN, without a title. The word "doctor" appears in some of the certificates, published verbatim as received without any claim to the title. Titles do not make a man any better; besides, every charlatan assumes to be a doctor or professor. There is no secret about this medicine, nor any secret about its preparation. There is no claim for any protection for any trade mark applied to it. All I claim is to make the medicine pure and upon scientific principles. I do not recommend the medicine as a specific for any particular disease, but acting upon general principles it effects its cures.

DIRECTIONS.

Shake the bottle so that the sediment may be well mixed; then take 20 to 60 drops in half a wine glass of water and milk. In the "concentrated" form, take but one-third this dose, viz., 6 to 20 drops—because in the bottles marked "concentrated," the medicine is three times as strong as that in the six ounce bottles. Let it be taken immediately after eating, so as to become mixed with the food and aid in its digestion. Commence with the small dose, and increase as the system will bear it. The dose should be regulated according to the condition of the bowels. In all cases where the "Seven Barks" does not keep the bowels freely open, take the CATHARTIC PILLS, in doses from one to four pills. If the dose moves the bowels too much, diminish it; if not enough, increase it.

This medicine is put up in 3 oz. and 6 oz. bottles. Also in 1 oz. and 2 oz. bottles marked "concentrated." The 1 oz. bottles of the concentrated contains as much medicine as the 3 oz. bottles. In the concentrated form the freight is much less. It cannot be sent by mail. If persons send me money, expecting me to send by mail, I shall be obliged to return the money. I want all my friends to purchase from my Agents, who will sell at the same price I charge here, so they will save the freight. If there be no Agent in the place, I will send small lots securely packed, by Express, upon receipt of price.

I would like the address of good reliable persons, that I could send them my "Agent's Circular."

☞ VERY COSTIVE PATIENTS SHOULD TAKE TWO OR THREE OF MY CATHARTIC PILLS EACH NIGHT ON GOING TO BED. THEY WILL BE FOUND TO BE EXCELLENT. PRICE 25c.

MEDICINE FOR GRAVEL IS PREPARED DIFFERENTLY, AND IS PUT IN SIX OZ. BOTTLES ONLY, WITH YELLOW LABEL. PRICE $1.00 PER BOTTLE.

Important Change.

Since putting out this Medicine, I have concluded to put it up in a still more concentrated form, in order to save freight. The contents of the 3 oz. Bottle are concentrated to One oz., and the contents of the 6 oz. Bottle to 2 oz., as the strength is correspondingly increased, the dose will be two-thirds less than is recommended in this Circular. For instance when thirty drops are recommended for a dose, in the concentrated form, but 10 drops will be taken. Or to each One oz. Bottle add 2 oz. of Water (4 tablespoonfuls), or to each Two oz. Bottle add 4 oz. Water (8 tablespoonfuls), and take the dose recommended in this Circular. The Medicine in this concentrated form can be relied upon as containing the same virtue as in the larger bottles.

AGENTS ARE WANTED

In every place in the land, to sell this valuable medicine. No CAPITAL REQUIRED TO SECURE AN AGENCY. Send for "Circular to Agents," for full particulars. This affords an excellent opportunity for men and women, who have a little leisure, to make a handsome income. Who will try it? I don't want Agents where I have one already, but in places where I have none—or where my Agent does not keep the people supplied.

Address, LYMAN BROWN,
49 WARREN ST., NEW YORK.

Agent.
